Capsule Summary

The Abrahams/Nicholson House is located at 622 Stafford Road, in Lapidum, Harford County, Maryland within the boundaries of Susquehanna State Park. This structure dates from the late Nineteenth century and has many of the hallmarks of Victorian architecture such as bay windows, centered gables, and large 1/1 sash windows. This is one of the few remaining survivors of the town of Lapidum which was laid out in 1868 by Conrad Baker Lapidum. This house is scheduled to be razed by the Department of Natural Resources due to the dilapidated condition and lack of adequate heating, electrical, and sewage systems.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Abrahams/Nicholson House is located at 622 Stafford Road, in Lapidum, Harford County, Maryland. This structure is located within Susquehanna State Park, and is situated directly in front of the Susquehanna River and the rear facade is situated next to a rocky hillside that had been excavated to accommodate this house.

This Victorian structure is two stories tall with a full attic, no basement, and a fieldstone foundation. A front porch extends the whole length of the front (east) facade and a two story bay window is located on the south facade. Windows on the first two floors vary between 2/2 sash and 1/1 sash. It is constructed of frame and the exterior is covered with wood cedar shingles that have weathered to a dark brown color. The roof has a large centered gable facing the River with one window located in the gable, which has a distinctive sash construction of three lights on the top, and two lights on the bottom. On the two other gables, on the north and south facades, there are also similar windows located in these which allow a lot of light to enter the interior attic space. Two brick chimneys are on the roof, one centered in the roof and one located on the northern roof end.

The interior on the first floor consists of three separate living areas, a living room, a dining room, and a long galley style kitchen. On the end of the kitchen (north side) is a rectangular storage room. Around these areas the stairway that leads to the second floor is centrally located in the house. The second floor has three bedrooms and a bathroom. Wood floors are located throughout.

Next to the house about 50 feet away to the south of the main house is a one car garage that is covered with the same wood cedar shingles as the main house. The foundation is constructed of rubble stone and there are three paneled doors with windows that face the northern facade of the house.

The house location is crammed onto the site with the front porch (east) with no setback, almost literally on the road. Across the street is the remnants of the Chesapeake and Tidewater Canal, which was filled in with dirt and is now a grassy area abutting the Susquehanna River. The rear of the main house is set into the hillside with a low fieldstone retaining wall on the western edge of the structure. Between the house and the wall is a small fuel tank.

This house is scheduled to be razed due to its dilapidated condition and its inadequate heating, sewage, and electrical systems. The house has not been in the Department of Natural Resources rental program since the early 1990's.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Abrahams house is a typical rural Victorian dwelling. This house and the Pugh House (HA381) are the survivors of the small late-19th century community of Lapidum, laid out in 1868 by Conrad Baker Lapidum. Other structures includes the Lapidum Masons' Lodge and School, and the Lapidum Inn, and Lapidum Methodist Church.

The following information collected by Paul Penrod, The attached title search was also executed by Penrod.

"This house was constructed during the latter part of the 19th century. One of its earliest owners was John J. Abrahams, who appears on the 1878 Martenet Map. The site of the structure was part of the parcel of land that Samuel Gover divided into small lots and sold during the early 1800's. This particular plot was owned at one time by William Sappington, who along with Robert Bell worked several stone quarries in the area. Another fragment of the property was owned by Charles & Isaac Willey, both of whom were barge captains on the river and tidewater canal. Another portion of the property was owned by the Mahan Family. In 1804, Elizabeth Mahan donated one acre for the construction of a Plaster Mill which was a cooperative venture of the "Farmers' Society of Harford County," supervised by the Rev. William Stevenson and John Quarles. The Mill was a two-storey, stone-frame affair, with a horse-powered grinder. Gypsum was landed at a nearby wharf and ground by the members of the Society."

RECOMMENDATIONS

This modest, late 19th century dwelling is currently an active rental property of the Department of Natural Resources. This structure should continue as such as long as it remains properly tenanted.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Abrahams House, located on the west side of Stafford Road north of its intersection with Herring Run, is a two-storey three bay wide, one bay deep wood-shingled structure dating from the final quarter of the 19th century. A shed-roofed, lower two-storey addition spans the rear (west) facade. A corbel-capped brick chimney is centrally located on the asphalt-shingled gable roof. The house sits on a low field-stone foundation.

The main (east) facade is defined by a central doorway flanked by 2/2 sashed windows on the first storey. Three 2/2 sashed windows mark the corresponding openings of the second storey. All windows have simple wooden surrounds with flush wooden sills. A semi-enclosed, half-hipped-roofed porch spans the first storey. A central gable with a multi-paned fixed-sash small window further defines the facade. Plain cornerboards outline the facade.

The north facade is very straight forward: windows with 2/2 sash are centrally located on the first and second storeys as well as a smaller 3/2 fixed sashed window at the attic level. Again, windows possess a simple wooden trim. The south facade however has received a more elaborate treatment. A two storey, tri-partite bay projects from this gable end. Windows with 1/1 sash mark the sides of both storeys. A heavily molded cornice surrounds the addition. A smaller 3/2 fixed sashed window is centrally located at the attic level.

A one storey gable roofed garage also of wood-shingled construction is found to the south of the main structure.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Abrahams house is a typical rural Victorian dwelling. This house and the Pugh House (HA381) are the survivors of the small late-19th century community of Lapidum, laid out in 1868 by Conrad Baker Lapidum. Other structures includes the Lapidum Masons' Lodge and School, and the Lapidum Inn, and Lapidum Methodist Church.

The following information collected by Paul Penrod, The attached title search was also executed by Penrod.

"This house was constructed during the latter part of the 19th century. One of its earliest owners was John J. Abrahams, who appears on the 1878 Martenet Map. The site of the structure was part of the parcel of land that Samuel Gover divided into small lots and sold during the early 1800's. This particular plot was owned at one time by William Sappington, who along with Robert Bell worked several stone quarries in the area. Another fragment of the property was owned by Charles & Isaac Willey, both of whom were barge captains on the river and tidewater canal. Another portion of the property was owned by the Mahan Family. In 1804, Elizabeth Mahan donated one acre for the construction of a Plaster Mill which was a cooperative venture of the "Farmers' Society of Harford County," supervised by the Rev. William Stevenson and John Quarles. The Mill was a two-storey, stone-grame affair, with a horse-powered grinder. Gypsum was landed at a nearby wharf and ground by the members of the Society."

RECOMMENDATIONS

This modest, late 19th century dwelling is currently an active rental property of the Department of Natural Resources. This structure should continue as such as long as it remains properly tenanted.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This Victorian structure is $2\frac{1}{2}$ stories tall, with a shed-roofed two-story addition in the rear. This east-facing structure is covered with wood shingles and has a low granite foundation. There is a two-story bay window on the southern end of the house, which is three bays by two. The fairly recent windows are 2 X 2 (1 X 1 in the bays), while the attic windows on the southern and northern gables are 3 X 1. One door is located on the east wall of the house, facing the river, while the other is sited on the south side of the addition. The roof is an asphalt-covered gable flank, with a box cornice and long eaves. The typical high-peaked dormer with a 3 X 1 window in it is located in the center of the roof on the east side. The new brick chimneys are stationed on the ridgeline at the center of the roof. A screened porch encompasses the entire front of the house.
